Results References Category:Vocal engineering I am not just talking about animal studies and how kids are impacted. In my daughter's first eight years of school (she has been in public school since pre-K), we have seen a steady decline in her homework, conceptually in her understanding of the world around her, in her attentiveness to the topics we discuss, in her ability to read, her ability to think critically about what she reads, in her ability to do basic math, and her overall ability to express her thoughts. Her current classroom's principal is a strong, dedicated educator, but the classroom's condition makes it difficult to teach anything. I am not just talking about the environmental destruction, the poor nutrition, the violence that kids are witness to every day. I am talking about the loss of the role of the parent in teaching kids to be good and critical thinkers. I see it in my own kids. We often have to defer to teachers for help with homework, help with math, help with reading, help with good food choices, help with thinking critically, and help with good hygiene. I think that it is tremendously sad and troubling. For those who don't yet know me, I am a wife, a daughter, a sister, a mother, a friend, a (former) teacher, and I LOVE gardens. I am not just talking about my personal preferences, that is, I love gardening. I love fresh fruit. I love gardening. In my daughter's first year of kindergarten, for the first time, she was raised to touch, smell, and eat produce. She was taught to wash and clean her vegetables, how to cut them properly, and how to feel good about eating them. She was taught how to pick her food and about the environmental impact of food production. The teacher is an excellent, dedicated educator, but the room her classroom is in, the conditions that it is in, makes it difficult to teach anything. I am talking about the environmental impact of gardening, about the strength of a garden, about the poverty of the farm that supplies the seed that we use to grow our garden, about the animal research that has occurred, about the antibiotics and hormones, about the pesticides
